Objective of the Seminar:

Targeted drug delivery has been the major stumbling block in many therapeutic segments including cancer and CNS related disorders. An ideal drug delivery system is expected to be non-toxic, biocompatible, non-immunogenic and biodegradable. Existing approaches including polymeric micelles, liposomes, lipoprotein-based drug carriers, nano-particle drug carriers, dendrimers, bioconjugates and prodrugs suffer from one limitation or the other. This seminar aims to address the above area and to orient research for a novel solution.
